The supposed starchild skull, in the opinion of the author, is no great discovery because its reality is morally disgusting. It is assumed that the educated reader out there is a little bit peeved by the over-usage of the term “space aliens” since that is a viewpoint from materialism and hocus-pocus science fiction. Certainly extra-terrestrial life exists all across the entire vastness of the multi-verses on different planes and different realms, much of which is not accessible to our mode of thinking and etc. The NXXS has seen the reality of this creature's life through the astral recording of the events around it using the Tarot deck and the prescribed, obscure methods found hidden deep within Blavatsky's works among other true seers and occultists.

It was around 3000 years ago when the strange creatures were originally found. You see, someone was manufacturing them off the coast of Mexico on an island just south of Baja California. It seems that these genetic manipulators were carting them off and making money on them. They used disgusting cross-breeding over a lengthy period of time to create the “starchild,” who was probably a full grown specimen. Yes someone powerful 3000 years ago could create genetic mutations. At some point, someone benevolent and connected to the highest civilization in the Andes (or possibly C. America or Mexico) happened upon a group of them inhabiting a region, like a valley or plateau. They were captured by them. They had colorful, bright gold eyes, or possibly other colors (purple or blue) and their skin was nearly transparent. They did not talk and they had no thought or mental capacity. They were dangerous and they would scream, kick, bite, crawl and pinch anyone who came to touch them. They only made howling noises or high pitch 'yowwwls' and they were strange, little humanoid people yet with normal sex differentiation. There was a couple (male and female) who were captured. So it definitely seems that the original, ancient bio-engineers off the coast of Mexico had probably dropped the stock off somewhere at some point (or maybe they escaped, it is of no use to read on it) and thus the high civilization people (i.e. early benevolent Mayans or Aztec) picked them up as anyone would do if they saw such an anomalous creature(s) sitting out somewhere in the middle of nowhere. The starchild is not alien or extra-terrestrial but came from this planet.

The Bat Creek Stone or Inscription is an artifact that was discovered in Tennessee. It seems like we are still at a time when the idea of multitudes of ancient civilizations still unknown are possible. Ideas rule the world as it has been said, so it will be until the idea crops into the mass consciousness that the possibility of amazingly rich histories across the globe are recognized and not frowned upon, by even the academicians.

The Bat Creek Stone, according to NXXS, is no forgery or hoax whatsoever. It is frustrating when obviously great findings are classed as hoaxes for the sake of the experts and their status quo. Enough commenting on what is already known in occult circles. There's probably only 1/9th of true history in the official textbook explanations. Let's take a look at the artifact.

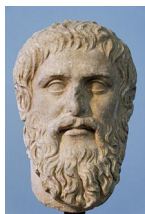

So there it is. You see some sort of inscription on it. Nothing too wordy is to be seen, but the important factor is that it is similar to ancient alphabets but this one is not known about. Read along and find about why it is not known since it is from a far off place. It is a beautiful piece of stone and authentic as the sunshine.

These travelers were there in Tennessee. There are probably many more of these tablets scattered about, still unearthed. Something somewhat esoteric in nature is inscribed upon it and it is read from right to left. This inscription speaks of the very long journey back home. They were at a place of no return. They made it because to them it could express their feelings. The clairvoyant wants to impress upon you that this event is recorded as a memory in the world soul. The desire of communication to their families back home was imprinted on stone. In the background of the consciousness at some point in all of our lives, we feel deja-vu for things not of ourselves. This event is certainly like that. Can you imagine their longing for returning back to their place of origin, all the while so far to be in the landscape of Tennessee along with the natives. They may have had one hundred of their people with them on this journey. Guess what? They came from the region near the border of modern day Krygyzstan and Kazakstan, triangulating around Balkhash-Almaty-Bishkek including Lake Balkhash as a sturdy identifier for an ancient area of human inhabitation. The tablet(s) were inscribed roughly 10,000 B.C. Tennessee was colder back then. Sometimes they had fights with the American natives. Some of them wanted to leave. These tablets may have been a form of artistic relieve, human expression or form of inspiration for the others in their group. Why did they go? They were explorers looking for adventure and knowledge. Trade was probably also involved. There might have passed through the Greek Islands and Mesopotamia during their journeys.

Acquainting oneself with Plato allows good fortune to come upon you. It brings the very good life into your life.

He embodies the essence of neutrality. He was an awesome teacher. He was the kind of person who took an interest in you. He was the head of the college. There was always another level with Plato. If you allowed him, he could lecture on and on and on...He would take people out to places and show them stuff. He was a philosopher of the old school of truth and had eyes of permanence. He is the opposite of everything shallow in our world. Acquaint with Plato, with Tarot, with Science.

Ō

Emanuel Swedenborg was a practicing occultist but not openly. He was a clairaudient, seer, a metaphysician. He was hindered by Roman Catholicism. He was a lay chela and the occult doctrine all made sense to him. He could see peoples' thoughts. He even knew how to destroy with psychic force if he ever would have done it is doubtful though. He could basically watch anyone at anytime. He dissolved bad relationships in his life. He suffered from strange feelings. He also had some artistic gifts.

NXXS Oath of Silences

I don't talk about misunderstandings.

I don't talk about let-downs.

I don't share personal stuff.

I don't involve personal dreams or visions.

I don't say anything gossipy or about other living people.

I have a strong policy not to encroach on beliefs, ideas, dreams or visions of others.

I don't talk about leaving or changing directions.

I don't make up things.

Oswald Wirth was a PAGAN. Earth to Ra he was a special person. Energetically more so than Waite or Mesmer in the opinion of the author. He squared everything off! This is a good guy...His Tarot was first in specifically Initiatory. It was created in 1889 (one year after TSD). He was an Initiate, a Builder. He did the right thing. He was on a very high level and knows things that are practically unknown to anyone.
